Cherry pit spittin' contest

The Kla Ha Ya Days Cherry Pit Spitting Contest will be on Saturday, July 20 at 1:00 p.m. at the Carnegie Bldg., 105 Cedar Ave.

Over a decade ago, Keith Stocker of Stocker Farms was asked to sponsor the traditional watermelon seed spitting contest and readily agreed to do so. However, Keith thought that a cherry pit-spitting contest would be better than the traditional watermelon seed spitting contest. Keith was right. Contestants wait in line for this fun event to begin! It's also easier for the judges to see and mark the cherry pits rather than smaller watermelon seeds.

Each competitor will be armed with three cherries containing three official pits to launch down the firing range. Pits will be taped to the paper and the longest launch will win.

The contest will be split in appropriate age divisions.

"We truly enjoy having a role in helping families enjoy the summer and one another," said Keith. "These fun contests at Kla Ha Ya Days are a journey back to the care free days of my childhood. Ever since I was old enough to ride my bike into town to see the Carnival, parade and street fair it has been a part of my home-town heritage and a legacy that Stocker Farms wants to pass on to our community. It's why we do what we do every summer, fall and winter with our agritainment operations."

The world record for cherry pit spitting is 93 feet, 6.5-inches! Come on down and see if you will be the next lucky person to set a new world record!

Enter the Watermelon Eating Contest

With the lazy days of summer upon us doesn't it seem like a good time to slow down, grab the family and take in a little time for yourselves. Spend the afternoon downtown Saturday, July 20, and create some family memories at Kla Ha Ya Days annual Watermelon Eating Contest held at 1:30 p.m. at the Carnegie Bldg, 105 Cedar Ave.

The Watermelon Eating Contest is one of the most popular contests of Kla Ha Ya Days. Go home with the bragging rights that go with being the fastest face in town to devour a wedge of sweet summer melon. Stocker Farms will equip the watermelon-eating competitors with up to a quarter of a watermelon (depending on age). The first one to eat the watermelon to the rind without having most of the melon still on the table will win. The judges will be looking for quantity consumed in the least amount of time.

"Helping families build lasting memories is what we are in business to do," said Keith Stocker of Stocker Farms. "We look forward to being able to support the community every summer when Snohomish celebrates Kla Ha Ya Days. It was such a significant part of my childhood and continues to remind me of a time when coming into town to take in the day's events was a summer highlight," continued Keith. "One can't help but smile as you see young faces buried into a quarter slice of sweet summer watermelon; coming up for a breath of air covered in juice and grinning ear-to-ear!"

There will be age appropriate divisions. If you think you can eat a lot of watermelon quickly, come on down and prove it during the contest!

Frogtastic Kids' Fair at Averill Field Friday, July 19, 3pm-7pm

The Kids' Fair at Kla Ha Ya Days is a must-visit event for families. With a wide range of activities and entertainment, there's something for kids of all ages to enjoy.

This is an entirely free event!

Inaugural Frog Races will be at 5:30 p.m. at the Kids' Fair. Local community and civic groups will put forth their best frogs in a competition you don't want to miss! (Hint: No actual frogs will be racing in this event.)

The Frogtastic Kids' Fair will be held at Averill Field this year, 400 Second Street.
